Book Synopsis

Royal Astor is the perfect oxymoron - a foreign reporter who has developed a severe fear of flying. He has been reporting on the Arab Spring but during his return home to Northern Ireland he convinces himself that he needs a new career - but what? He is very much an analogue journalist in a new digital world. During his terror-gripped flight he meets John Harding, a character that Astor struggles to figure out. He claims to be 'in consulting' but Astor can see a touch of ink sneaking up from below John's collar. Just who is this man? When he returns home Astor is also tasked by a long standing family friend to track down a young girl who the old man fathered roughly 22 years ago. If he can do this he'll ensure she receives her inheritance, a sum approaching £30m, but with sums like that floating around it is guaranteed to get dangerous for the young woman. 'Tribalism' is the second book from Northern Irish author PD Finlay and is a fast-paced, action-packed thrill ride and once it grabs you it never lets you go!
